

TI People in the Experience Economy

The world of work is changing: We live in an Experience Economy, where the lines between customers and employees are blurred. People expect superior customer experiences from companies they do business with, and they expect the same of organizations they work for: Compensation itself in exchange for one's labor, skills and contribution is no longer sufficient. Experience is a substantial factor in determining if and how relationships in this new era are forged and endure over time.

Founded in 2016 and located in Hamburg, London, and Washington DC, TI People is the experience company that helps organizations enrich people's lives at work. We believe that all individuals deserve better experiences and know that the organizations that deliver them in every moment are more successful. We have designed a unique consulting model to aid senior executives adapting the most progressive companies in the world to the experience economy.

For the next level of growth we are looking for a (Junior) Consultant (d/f/m)

based in Hamburg or London.

Your Impact

As (Junior) Consultant at TI People, you will help the leading companies in the world with measuring, designing, and managing their employee's experiences as we're convinced that everyone deserves a better life at work.

Working in projects, you will interact directly with senior executives, and engage with our customers' employees to re-design their experiences. With us, your travel burden will be limited, and you won't work long consulting hours. But you can influence how large organizations perceive and live employee experience.

What Makes You Successful

You are a top decile talent with up to 3 years of work experience. You are a positive challenger, intellectually curious, and have a hands-on mentality in finding solutions for our clients' needs. You have fun facilitating interactions with client groups and are ready to deploy and expand skills in data analysis as well as design thinking and agile methodology.

And you enjoy working and growing in an open-minded, entrepreneurial team.

Your Contact

To further explore this job opportunity, please reach out to timo.tischer@ti-people.com.